T.L. JACKSON CONSTRUCTION AND MISSION CONTRACTING MERGER WILL CREATE SYNERGISTIC EFFECTS FOR THEIR CUSTOMERS

Syracuse, IN: Brad and Bruce Jackson will be joining forces once again in 2018. Their father, Tom Jackson, started in the construction business in 1972. His sons, Brad and Bruce joined the business in their teens and took over control in 2005 when their father retired. In 2007 Bruce decided to strike out on his own and started Mission Contracting. After 10 successful years, he has decided to return to the family fold and merge his company with T.L. Jackson Construction. The new corporate structure will continue as T.L. Jackson Construction, Inc.

Bruce formed Mission Contracting to pursue his passion for being on site. The business steadily grew to new custom homes, remodeling and light commercial construction. Growth took the company to the point where Bruce either had to add staff, management and support positions, or scale back operations. At the same time, Brad was looking for a way to focus more on company growth for T.L. Jackson and less on the day to day operations. Bruce had previously talked to a few other builders about merging companies but didn't feel they were the right match. In a somewhat divinely directed conversation, Bruce and Brad determined that merging together into one company would create the solution they were both looking for.

Stephen Covey said, "Synergy is the highest activity of life; it creates new untapped alternatives; it values and exploits the mental, emotional, and psychological differences between people. Synergy is what happens when one plus one equals ten or a hundred or even a thousand!" The merger of T.L. Jackson Construction and Mission Contracting will definitely result in synergy. The combined success and experience of Bruce and Brad will result in greater levels of quality, customer service, and customer satisfaction.
